2. If the author is not named in the text, cite the author (in alphabetical order for multiple citations) and the year in parentheses [If more than six authors appear in a citation, cite only the surname of the first author followed by et al. and the year; 3 to 6 authors, list all names when the citation appears the first time, then use (first author et al., year); 2 authors, list both names throughout]:

Culture is an important determinant in social work practice (Caline, 2001).

According to recent surveys of more than 20,000 social workers (Bison, 2000, 2001; Peters & Olson, 2009; Peterson, Peters, Caline, Lees, & Aliceson, 2000; Rerson et al., 2009), social work is both an art and a science. An added comparative analysis found that social workers believe their work is more an art than a science (Peterson et al., 2000).

3. If the citation is a direct quotation, provide page number after quote:

Peters and Olson (2009) found that the media effect, which had been verified in previous studies, "disappeared when behaviors were studied in a group" (p. 276).

In 2009, Peters and Olson coined the term mutual celeration effect and believed it to be "the most important component in statistical analysis" (p. 271).

4. If the reference has no author, use the title or publisher:

From a professional perspective, social workers are political advocates (B. Simons, personal communication, January 17, 2009).

7. If the citation is to a statute or bill, cite the year:

According to the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (1974), mandatory reporting system has many advantages.

In policy, prevention is a key to treatment success (S. 596, 1994).

8. If the citation is to a court decision, cite Name v. Name (year):

Lessard v. Schmidt (1972) is a classical case to connect drug abuse and child abuse.

A classical case on drug abuse (Lessard v. Schmidt, 1972) revealed that 52% of parents who abuse drugs are also child abusers.

10. Statistics in the text:

Only two areas indicated statistically significant differences: (1) emotional responses ($t(45)=-6.07$, $p<.001$ one tailed) and (2) cognitive recognition of feelings ($t(45)=4.92$, $p=.015$).

For immediate responses, the main effect of emotional responses was statistically significant, $F(2, 121)= 4.22$, $p=.03$.

In terms of visual effects of the hospitalized subjects ($n=45$), the average anxiety level ($M=7.12$, $SD=1.11$) has been increasing since the start of the intervention program. However, clients' perceived level of discomfort ($M=2.11$, $SD=.11$) has been stabilized.
